

Anne Elvedal

THOSE WHO KILL ON A MONDAY

Original title: De som dreper på en mandag
Publisher: Cappelen Damm, 2025
Category: Crime/Thriller
Pages: 80

A wickedly original blend of crime fiction and slam poetry. Anne Elvedal reinvents the crime genre with this dark, witty, and genre-defying collection of short stories told in rhyme.

Each tale is a compact mystery — morbid, funny, serious, and surprising — delivered with sharp rhythm, poetic flair, and a killer twist.

Fifteen crime slams. Fifteen murders. Fifteen very human killers.
All of them strike on a Monday.

We meet a wife driven to the edge by her husband's loud chewing, a sleazy old man, a disillusioned lawyer, a divorced father, a bullied schoolboy, a nun, a cop, a beauty and a beast — and a bowling team, too.

People say murderers are monsters. But there are no monsters here. Only people.

Those Who Kill on a Monday is a fast-paced, inventive and addictive read — like Agatha Christie with rhythm and rhymes.

Illustrated by Knut Nærum.

Anne Elvedal

Anne Elvedal is a successful screenwriter and also a trained nurse. She has worked several years in psychiatry. In recent years, she has written horror books for children and young adults to excellent reviews, and last year she released her first psychological thriller, You can call me Jan.

